

How the Observations are Made.

The stations in the districts for making weather observations, of which there are seventy four, are divided into two classes: First stations of observation and report, to which reports of other stations are forwarded—such as New York, Cleveland, Baltimore, &c. Second, stations which simply make reports and forward those received by them. These are in charge of observer sergeants trained in the Fort Whipple and West Point schools of discipline, and are subject to all the military regulations. They pass through a severe school of six months in the service at the fort, even in learning telegraphy, and when assigned to stations are supplied with the following instruments, the working of which they thoroughly understand: First, a barometer, upon which all calculations of the density of the atmosphere are based. Second, a self-registering thermometer which indicates at a glance the maximum and minimum temperature of a day. Third, a hygrometer by which the degree of the humidity of the atmosphere is ascertained. Fourth, the anemometer which shows the force of the wind and the rate of speed it is blowing. This consists of four cups, each shaped like half of a hollow sphere. These are attached to the two ends of two arms, which cross each other at the centre. These turn upon an axis, something after the fashion of a top. This axis terminates in an endless screw, which, by communicating with figured cog-wheels, register the velocity of the wind up to 1,000 miles. Fifth, a rain-gauge and river gauge, the one a copper tube in which each fall of rain is measured, and the other a graduated plank used to note the rise and fall of western rivers. Sixth, the anemoscope, or old fashioned vane, which is fixed to a rod which revolves in a hollow tube and runs into the room beneath, where a gilt arrow is attached to its end and which, corresponding to the motions of the vane above, notes the point of the compass to which the wind is blowing.

Stewart's Home for Women.

Mr. A. T. Stewart's Home for Young Women, in New York, is all finished except the interior work. It is located on Fourth avenue, between Thirty-second and Thirty-third streets. It has a frontage of 192 feet on Fourth avenue, and of 205 feet on each of the other streets, and covers 41,000 square feet in all. The building is six stories high, with a Mansard roof of pure white in color, handsome design, and admirable construction. The upper stories are from 11 to 14 feet in height, which will give space enough for fresh air. There is an interior court of 64x116 feet, which will be rendered attractive by a fountain and other ornamental features. The motive power of the whole edifice is steam, which furnishes heat, runs the elevators, works the ventilating fans, &c. The kitchen and laundry are modelled upon the more modern hotel plans, and the dining-room, which is 39x92 feet, will be conducted on the restaurant plan. There are other large halls for lectures, concert, library, and recreations. The larger ones, 16x18 are intended for sisters or companions; the smaller ones, 8x9 feet, for one person only. The object of the Home is to furnish working girls with all the conveniences of a hotel and the protection of good associations for the smallest practical prices. It is believed that good wholesome accommodations can thus be secured for a less price than is paid for squalid lodging in a tenement house. In furnishing this Mr. Stewart has provided a substantial charity, which will be all the more efficient because it is not altogether gratuitous.

USE OF CHARCOAL.—The Country Gentleman says: "At this season of the year one desires to obtain some purifier, and charcoal is of the greatest value for the purpose. All kinds of utensils can be purified from disagreeable odors by rinsing them out with charcoal dust wet into a soft paste. Putrid water is immediately deprived of its bad smell by its use. When meat, flesh, etc., are liable to become spoiled from long keeping, charcoal dust will keep them sweet; and if there is a slight taint to meat, it can be taken out by putting three or four pieces of it as large as an egg into the water in which it is boiled. This will effectually purify that which seems too far gone to use."

SUN PRINTING ON FRUIT.—Boys and girls, if you wish to astonish any members of the family or any coming guests by some day allowing them to discover their initials neatly printed on a pear, peach, or apple, as it hangs on its branch, this is the way to carry out your plan: Just before the fruit ripens, cut the desired letters from a sheet of thin, tough paper; then paste them on the side of the fruit most exposed to the sun, and when in course of time you remove the paper from the ripe surface you will find the letters distinctly marked upon it.
